“How to succeed in technology without being a full-time geek””

with guest speaker Allison McEnaney,
Head of Equity Technology Asia Pacific, Bank of America Merrill Lynch

Allison will share details of her personal journey to success in technology, and explain why it is not just about being technical.

Allison McEnaney currently manages Equity Technology for Asia Pacific, overseeing development and production support for all Equity Applications in the region. Prior to this, she was responsible for Asia Equity Derivatives and Financing Technology.

Before rejoining Bank of America Merrill Lynch, Allison was at Deutsche Bank in London where she worked in Equity Derivatives and Group Treasury IT.

She is a graduate of Cornell University with a degree in Engineering. Allison has been with the bank since 2011, but was previously with Merrill Lynch for 9 years working both in New York and London offices and started her career as part of the Merrill Lynch Graduate Program

Allison is currently living in Hong Kong. She is a member and organiser of a local hiking group that leads hikes for over 6000 members and contributes to a number of community service activities
