The Japanese economy and the markets seem to be reacting positively to Abenomics, with an unconventional BOJ monetary policy helping to shift people's mindset and increase corporate confidence. At the same time, however, many people are still skeptical about the current Abenomics growth strategy. Please join us on October 23rd for a discussion on the current status of “Abenomics” with Ms. Lisa Twaronite, Senior Correspondent at Thomson Reuters, facilitating the discussion with our guest speaker Ms. Junko Nishioka.

Junko Nishioka, Head of Research Japan and Chief Economist, is based in Tokyo. She is responsible for research and analysis of the Japanese economy. Before joining RBS Securities Japan in July 2008, she worked at ABN AMRO Securities (2007-2008), Mitsubishi UFJ Securities (2006-2007) and Bank of Japan (2002-2006).

Ms. Nishioka joined the Industrial Bank of Japan (currently Mizuho financial group) in April 2000, where she started working as an Economist of domestic and international economies.

Ms. Nishioka graduated from the Graduate School of Economics / Faculty of Economics, Kyoto University. She was ranked sixth in the Annual Nikkei Veritas Fixed Income Economist Ranking in March 2014.
