Please join us as Anne shares her personal experiences on what it takes to be a global leader, and offers advice on career management.

Anne Clarke Wolff is managing director and head of Global Corporate Banking at Bank of America Merrill Lynch.

Based in New York, Clarke Wolff is responsible for the firm's corporate banking coverage efforts globally which touch over 4000 clients across a range of credit, financing, treasury and risk solutions.

Prior to joining the firm she was head of Global Sales for Treasury and Securities Services at JP Morgan Chase & Co., where she transformed the sales organization and drove double digit revenue growth.

Previously, Anne spent nearly 20 years with Citigroup in a variety of senior roles including head of North America Corporate Banking, head of Fixed Income Capital Markets and head of U.S. Debt Capital Markets.

She holds a BA from Colby College and an MBA from Northwestern University. She served on the board for Colby for eight years and remains a Trustee Emeritus. In addition, she serves on two boards of the Brooklyn Historical Society and The Public Theater, home of Shakespeare in the Park.
