Borders are not just the ones we find when we cross from one geographic location to another. Often, in organizations large and small, we encounter a number of different “borders” or boundary lines each and every day: country differences, cultural differences, language differences, age differences, skill differences, and capacity differences. How do you lead a team more effectively when faced with such a challenging environment?

Haruko Watanabe, Chief Operating Officer, AIG Fuji Life, will talk about leadership across borders: leading different teams across the many different borders we each face every day.

Prior to her current role at AIG Fuji Life, Haruko spent three years as HR Strategic Business Partner at AIG Fuji Life, two years as Executive Vice President, Human Resources, Chartis Far East Holdings K.K. (Member of AIG), and several years at Goldman Sachs Japan, first as Vice President, Head of Human Capital Management, then as Managing Director, Head of Human Capital Management. Prior to that, Haruko worked for the Bank of Japan where she worked in the areas of finance and human resources.

Haruko holds a BA in Economics from the University of Tokyo and attended the University of Chicago School of Business.
