In today's world, international travel can involve a rapidly expanding number of risks. For women, these risks are often magnified, especially in certain regions of the world. When traveling internationally for business, there are additional travel safety issues that should be considered and risk awareness is essential.

Elizabeth Harvey, Head of Global Operations and Investigations, Global Security Division, AIG, has specifically designed this informative session to identify, educate, and address safety issues for women traveling abroad. The presentation will cover a range of travel issues including preparation, transportation and hotel security, global crime trends, and personal safety techniques.

With over eight years of experience in corporate security and her tours of duty as a member of the U.S. Military Police Corps, Elizabeth is acutely aware of the risks women travelers can face and she is one of the most qualified women globally to speak authoritatively on this subject. She joined AIG in 2005 after completing military service as a Captain in the Military Police Corps. The highpoints of her military service were 30 exits from a perfectly good aircraft, servings as a Jump Master with the XVIII Airborne Corps, as well as tours of duty in Korea and Kosovo.

Elizabeth earned her BA from the University of California, Santa Barbara (Linguistics) and her MA from Webster University (Business and Organizational Security Management). She is married and has two sons.

Doors open at 7:00 pm. Speaker starts at 7:30 pm
